Welcome to People to People

People to People Citizen Ambassador Programs offers specialized international travel programs for professionals that help you build your local and global network, develop your career, and open the door to people and places beyond compare.

Join leaders Nancy B. Jackson, Ph.D., manager of the International Chemical Threat Reduction Department at Sandia National Laboratories and the 2011 president of the American Chemical Society, and Russell J. Boyd, Ph.D., the Alexander McLeod Professor of Chemistry at Dalhousie University and a past president of the Canadian Society for Chemistry (a constituent society of the Chemical Institute of Canada), traveling to Brazil in May 2011. Delegates will take part in facility walk-throughs, informal social events, and roundtable discussions with their professional counterparts in the green chemistry and engineering field.

Your Brazil Program

A few words from Dr. Jackson and Dr. Boyd:

The American Chemical Society and the Canadian Society for Chemistry, through their relations with other national chemical societies, are committed to promoting the development and adoption of green chemistry. The delegation will provide an opportunity for scientists, engineers, business leaders, and government advisors in Brazil, the U.S., and Canada to exchange knowledge on green chemistry and engineering state-of-the-art research and best practices.

Our delegation will explore and discuss:

- Utilization of a set of principles that reduces or eliminates the use or generation of hazardous substances in the design, manufacture, and application of chemical products
